IN SICKNESS OR IN HEALTH?

Rae Labuschagné will take a look at the way many of us view aging i.e. through a "distorted lens of disease" (Ebersole p3). How is it and why is it that the majority of the world's aged population live in the community, and go about their daily lives relatively successfully? What factors contribute to their wellbeing and what role does personal responsibility play in the health of an ageing population?

Mankind's technological developments have contributed to overcoming infectious diseases, but is the time of chronic disability being extended over a longer period of time for many of the older population or will the duration of disability be compressed as the limits of man's life span and life expectancy are being reached?

These questions and others will be looked at.
